STATEMENT OF FACTS

15. On the morning of Wednesday, September 1, 2004, during the Republican National Convention at Madison Square Garden, Plaintiffs were peaceably exercising free speech and assembly, by standing on the public sidewalk displaying signs with a pro-life message. More specifically, Plaintiffs were standing on the sidewalk in front of the Pennsylvania Hotel, on the east side of Seventh Avenue, between 32nd and 33rd Streets, across the street from Madison Square Garden.

16. At the time of Plaintiffs' demonstration, the sidewalk where Plaintiffs were standing was open to the public, and scores of people were passing by, unimpeded by Plaintiffs'

First Amendment activities.

17. Defendant Police officers approached Plaintiffs, derided the content of the message on one of their signs, and ordered them to leave the sidewalk where they were standing. Plaintiffs explained that they just wanted to be in "sight and sound" of the attendees of the event, and asked where they could go to be in "sight and sound" of the attendees of the event. Police flatly responded "you can't . . . not at all . . . not right here."

18. One of the officers who ordered Plaintiffs to leave was wearing badge number 24678.

19. Mr. Marcavage then asked permission to appeal to Sergeant Ebanks, Community Affairs Officer, who was standing nearby. Mr. Marcavage explained to Sergeant Ebanks that he and Mr. Lefemine wanted to be in "sight and sound" of the attendees of the event. The Sergeant stated that they could not be in the "frozen zone" that police had defined, and directed them to go to a different location.

20. The location to which Defendant Ebanks ordered them to retreat was not in a place where the Plaintiffs could effectively communicate their message to the convention attendees. Mr. Marcavage indicated that the new location was not near where people were coming into the event, and that no one would see or hear them there. The Sergeant replied that Plaintiffs would have to "find a way", but they could not stay where they were. In fact, he stated, "you can't be here, that's why we came here, because you can't be here - that's why I'm here."

21. Mr. Marcavage inquired of the Sergeant, "Which law are we violating if we stand here?" pointing out that the area was not closed to the public and that there were people walking up and down the sidewalk. Once again the Sergeant flatly asserted that Plaintiffs were not supposed to be there. Mr. Marcavage explained that he was not trying to debate with the Sergeant, but that he was simply trying to determine what law he would be violating if he did not leave the sidewalk, because he believed his presence there was protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.

22. Mr. Marcavage again asked if there was an area where Plaintiffs could stand where they would be in "sight and sound" of the people coming into the event. Sergeant Ebanks directed Plaintiffs to go to 8th Avenue and 31st Street. Mr. Marcavage again pointed out that no one would see or hear them there, and that all the convention attendees come through the main area directly across the street from where he was standing.

23. During their conversation with Sergeant Ebanks, Plaintiffs moved from their original location on the sidewalk to the corner across the street, in an effort to cooperate with Defendants. As they were walking, Mr. Marcavage asked Sergeant Ebanks what he thought about the fact that the First Amendment rights of citizens were being violated by the establishment of "frozen zones," and sought to verify that the consequence of Plaintiffs' continuing to stand in their current location would be their arrest.

24. Mr. Marcavage then confirmed with the Sergeant that Plaintiffs had no choice but to move to the location Sergeant Ebanks had directed. Sergeant Ebanks replied "that's where all you guys are supposed to be." Mr. Marcavage objected to the lumping together of all those exercising free speech, all of whom had different views and opinions, and explained that Plaintiffs wanted to be able to express themselves in a separate location.

25. At this point, Mr. Marcavage, expressing that he was very uncomfortable with the situation, attempted to continue his conversation with Sergeant Ebanks. Captain Staples stepped in and repeatedly began telling Mr. Marcavage that he had to leave the area immediately. Plaintiff Lefemine then asked if he and Plaintiff Marcavage were being threatened with arrest. Captain Staples replied, "no you are already [under arrest]."

26. Plaintiffs repeatedly asked the officers what law they were violating and for what reason they were under arrest. Officers failed to articulate what law Plaintiffs had broken.

27. Officer Donnelly then arrested Plaintiffs. They were handcuffed and taken to a "detention center" at Pier 57.

28. This "detention center" was actually an old abandoned warehouse. The structure itself was contaminated with asbestos and saturated with the stench of diesel oil, and housed over a dozen razor wire cages, where the Plaintiffs were held along with others who had been arrested.

29. During Plaintiffs' processing, some police officers harassed, intimidated, disparaged and verbally abused them. One officer, referring to Mr. Marcavage's pro-life sign, stated several times, "You should have been aborted!" while some of the officers nearby laughed.

30. After spending several hours in the warehouse, Mr. Lefemine and Mr. Marcavage, along with other detainees, were handcuffed and loaded onto a hot, cramped, police bus, where they sat for approximately one hour before being driven at high speed by police escort to Central Booking.

31. Plaintiffs were subsequently chained to other arrestees, jailed, and abused, by systematically transferring them from one overcrowded cell to another, to deprive them of the the ability to sleep. Plaintiffs were forced to either sit on the grease and grime covered jail floor, or to stand for hours, as there was only limited bench seating. The cells were humid, and everyone was dirty. At times, Plaintiffs were chained to other arrestees for hours, and had to sit on the floor in the jail's hallway while awaiting a transfer to another overcrowded cell.

32. Plaintiffs Michael Marcavage and Steve Lefemine spent over 32 emotionally and physically draining hours in jail, during which they were degraded, disrespected, insulted and abused.

33. Judge John Cataldo held the City of New York in contempt for refusing to comply with his order directing them to release over 560 people, including the Plaintiffs, who had been detained for an unreasonable length of time, without having been arraigned.

34. Plaintiffs Michael Marcavage and Steve Lefemine were charged with Disorderly Conduct. Cases against both Plaintiffs were ultimately dismissed, albeit not without causing unnecessary hardship, expense, and injustice to Plaintiffs. Mr. Marcavage had to return to New York City from Lansdowne several times for court appearances, which was burdensome and time consuming.
